PREMIER CHALLENGES LIBERALS

GERMANY FAVORS HITLER RULE

SOVIET GIVES BOMBING THREAT

TORONTO—Premier Henry of Ontario has announced that the government will issue a writ for a by-election in East Kent, and at the same time challenges Mitchell P. Hepburn, M.P., Ontario Liberal leader, to run in the riding without government opposition.

"On a number of occasions I have expressed a desire to see Mr. Hepburn, the chosen leader of the Liberal party, in a seat in the House so that his variety of utterances on public matters may come under the rules of the House in debate. Mr. Hepburn will now have an opportunity to enter the assembly should he wish to do so, and if he will run the government will not oppose him," the premier said.

MERLIN—Overwhelming endorsement of Chancellor Adolf Hitler's foreign policies and the Nazi regime came in early returns from the general election in what was obviously the largest vote in the history of the nation. While returns have not been completed, they show 92.9 per cent of counted ballots for Nazi political domination, and 92.9 per cent with a "yes" for the Chancellor's foreign policies.

It was estimated that the final vote would exceed 90 per cent of the qualified electors.

MOSCOW—A threat by the far eastern sector of the Communist Party to bomb Japanese centers of population from the air if Japan attempts aggression into the Soviet Union, is regarded as the most outspoken warning yet voiced against the possible violation of the country's far eastern frontier.

The threat is contained in a Communist party manifesto published in Vladivostok during recent celebrations of the October revolution anniversary.

It charges Japanese imperialism with "rearing an armed base in Manchukuo in order to begin war and declares that Japan have their eyes on 'immediate catastrophe' if its military Party should put into effect its policy."

It is understood the far eastern Red Army is equipped with a large number of powerful bombing planes, capable of a flight as far as Tokyo and return.

Central Bank Recommended By Royal Commissioners

OTTAWA—With the two Canadian banker-members dissenting, the majority of the Royal Commission of five appointed to investigate Canada's banking and currency system, recommends that a central bank for Canada be "forthwith established."

Since all parties in the House of Commons are apparently committed, to the setting up of such an institution, it is likely this will be one of the first actions taken when it assembles in January. Nothing in the report would indicate that the central bank would have any direct power to render credits more accessible to agriculturists but a special chapter deals with this problem.

The commission suggests a Dominion-provisional investigation to determine organization for the extension of intermediate and short term agricultural credit.

Several recommendations for minor changes in general banking practice are made but in the main the commission found little fault with the existing system, except in the lack of a central bank.

The proposal is the establishment of a central bank structure of which the governor, deputy-governor and directors would be the first to be appointed by the Governor-in-Council, and thereafter by the shareholders with the approval of the Governor-in-Council.

It would have a capital of $5,000,000 open to subscription by all British subjects resident in Canada, and all excess profits would revert to the government.

The chairman, Lord Macmillan, Sir Charles Adair, and Hon. J. E. Brownlee were the majority favoring the setting up of a central bank. Sir Charles Adair and Hon. J. E. Brownlee submitted individual statements setting forth their objections particularly on the grounds that even such an institution may eventually prove essential in Canada, the present troubled state of finance and business would be an inopportune time for such a venture.

Mr. Brownlee, while agreeing to the main recommendation, filed a dissenting statement with respect to the structure of the bank. He would have the entire capital subscribed by the government and the appointment of officers remain perpetually with the Federal administration, rather than the proposed system of private ownership.

Four of the commissioners were agreed on abolition of the state fixed maximum interest rate charged by banks at 7 per cent. Mr. Brownlee dissented but did not argue that the regulation were to be retained, that section of the Bank Act should be made clear and a penalty imposed for any contravention.

Other recommendations submitted for consideration of parliament in revising the Bank Act, and for private initiative of the banks themselves, may be summarized as follows:

In the interests of farmers who generally require credit running from 6 to 12 months, "the banks would be well advised in the case of satisfactory customers, to endeavor to meet their wishes and convenience in this matter."

Abolition of the charge of operating accounts and collecting cheques.

"That the banks be permitted to continue in the investment business but restrict their ventures to the highest class securities available."

"That shareholders of the Canadian banks should consider the advisability of providing a 'generous proportion' of directors from the eastern and western portions of the Dominion, in view of alleged subordination of the interests of those sections to those of the central area."

"That it would be unwise to restrict membership on bank directorates to those who are not directors of other corporations."

"That banks concerned should amend their by-laws so as to prevent directors voting or attending at meetings where credits lent themselves or their firms are being considered."

Mitres: "I notice that your police man friend calls frequently. Do you think he means business?"

Townpeople Not Eligible for Free Freight

Residents of towns and villages in the drought area will not be able to share in the policy of free freight movement to other places, according to announcement by A.H. Chandler, of the Relief Division, Edmonton. The free transportation policy is a three-way agreement between the federal, provincial and municipal governments and the railways, whereby each assumes one-third of the cost, and the railways refused to cooperate in making facilities from towns. The railways pointed out that many persons in business and many employees in the office and towns in Western Canada, outside the drought area are in exactly the same position as those to whom it was proposed to allow transportation, and the railways felt it was impossible to differentiate between residents in towns and villages in the drought area and similar situated towns outside the area.

STATEMENT OF DEFENCE FILED BY BROWNLEE

EDMONTON—Characterizing allegations contained in the statement of claim filed by Allen B. MacMillan, C.N.R. employee, and former mayor of Edmonton, and his daughter, Vivian MacMillan, former provincial government spokeswoman as "false, frivolous, vexatious, scandalous and an abuse of the process of the court and ought to be struck and expunged from the court records." Douglas J.B. Brownlee on Monday filed his statement of defence of the action. They claim illegal selection and sought summary dismissal.

The premier files a counter claim for $10,000 damages against the MacMillans and John Caldwell, their counsel, and John Caldwell at the University of Alberta.

He charges that "Vivian MacMillan and John Caldwell conspired with others unknown to defendant to obstruct justice by getting the plaintiff, Vivian MacMillan to declare and by inducing her to cause it to be believed that she was enticed from her father's home and seduced by the defendant Brownlee."

"That they invented and made the allegations and maliciously asserted and declared and endeavored to cause it to be believed and conspired with divers persons at present unknown to secure money."

B. C. VOTE GIVES VICTORY TO THE LIBERAL PARTY

Vancouver, B.C.—British Columbia voted to solve the most confused political situation with which she has ever been confronted, and decided to entrust her government to the Liberal party under the leadership of T. D. Pattison.

Decision was decisive. Voting in 41 seats out of 47, the electorate returned at least 29 Liberals, six representatives of the Co-Operative Commonwealth Federation and one candidate each of the United Government, Independent Non-Partisan, Independents and Labor. Two seats, Dewdney and Peace River, were doubtful with a Liberal leading in the former and an Independent in the latter.

Six seats, four in Victoria and two in Vancouver Centre will be decided November 27.

A feature of the election, in addition to the decisiveness of the victory for the Liberals, was the showing of the Co-Operative Commonwealth Federation, who in addition to electing six members and becoming the probable opposition, gave the winning party their hardest fight in absolute casualties.

Another feature was the absolute failure of the Independent Non-Partisan movement, which had as its object formation of a union government, but was opposed to the United administration of Premier Tominie, R. W. Bruden, one of the group's leaders, and former minister of works in the Tominie government, was the only representative elected.

Independents also fell by the wayside, except Hugh Savage in Cowichan-Newcastle, who believes in putting the principles of the Oxford movement into operation in politics.

Premier S. P. Tominie went down to personal defeat and only one of his supporters was elected. Hon. R. H. Pooley, attorney-general, lost his seat by a narrow margin. The seat has belonged to the Pooley family for 43 years.

Sweeping Gains By British Labor Party

Win Large Number Of Seats In Municipal Elections

London, Eng.—Sweeping Labor gains in municipal elections throughout England, coupled with the decisive Labor victory in the by-election in traditionally Conservative Fulham a few days ago, have aroused the Prime Minister and his colleagues of the National Government to the necessity of rallying their forces behind the National Government.

The cabinet met at Downing Street and the Prime Minister laid down that with parliament opening and with a debate on disarmament impending, the government will lose no time in stating its policy in the European crisis. Disarmament figured largely in the campaign of the Labor candidate in East Fulham.

Sir John Simon, secretary for foreign affairs, will state the government's case upon the reassembling of parliament and the Labor members then will decide whether to launch a vote of censure.

Large gains for Labor are shown in the elections in England and Wales under the system of councils retired each year. London County where the triennial election of borough councils are due next year, is not included.

Benefit Export Business

Sir Henry Drayton Sees N.R.A. Plan As Aid To Canada

Toronto, Ont.—Possibility of the export business of Canada benefiting at the expense of the export business of the United States as a result of the N.R.A., as it now operates, was foreseen by Sir Henry Drayton, one-time Canadian Minister of Finance, at an address before Incorporated Accountancy and Auditors Association of Ontario, Toronto chapter.

One direct effect of the N.R.A., according to Sir Henry, was to increase costs. "Increased price levels must always injure export business," he declared. "I expect the export business of the United States will be as matters now stand, injuriously affected by the N.R.A. Its success would be a real benefit to us."

R.C.M.P. Strike A Blow At Illegal Trade In Quebec

Seizure last Sunday of documents said to incriminate 538 persons in illegal liquor traffic between the French-owned islands of St. Pierre and Miquelon, and St. Lawrence coast towns in Quebec brought to a climax weeks of intense investigation into the activities of run-runners.

Simultaneous arrests were made on "headquarters" in the towns of Matane, Riviere Du Loup, Bic, and St. Francois Du Lac, while several liquor-laden vessels—including the river boats Skipslop and No. 12—were also seized.

It is understood the leader of the ring was being detained at Riviere Du Loup and that several other arrests were imminent.

HAVE REACHED AGREEMENT ON OCEAN AIR ROUTE

The terms could not be disclosed at present, he said, but they were satisfactory to all parties who had participated in a conference here last summer.

The prime minister was interviewed following Sir Eric Geddes' announcement to shareholders of Imperial Airways in London, England, that the British government had "established a very cordial relationship with official and commercial aviation interests in Canada and can anticipate development of this trans-Atlantic project in complete harmony between Britain and Canada."

Mr. Alderdice offered no prediction as to when the service would be established. He said he felt certain, however, a trans-Atlantic air base would be developed "eventually" in Newfoundland.

Canadian Coal Industry

Control Under N.R.A. Code Plan Is Advanced

Truro, N.S.—Control of the Canadian coal industry under a code based on the principles underlying President F. D. Roosevelt's industrial regulations in the United States would assure improved operations for Nova Scotia mines, delegates to the tripartite convention of the United Mine Workers of America were told Wednesday by Thomas Kennedy, international secretary treasurer of the organization.

By this means, and by taking advantage of the N.R.A.'s operations below the border, the international executive declared, mining activities in the province could be brought back to a full time pace. Application of a Canadian code, he said, would mean an embargo would be placed on coal entering Canada in unfair competition with Canadian coal, thus providing a wider outlet for the domestic product.

British Newspaper Correspondent To Be Released From Munich Jail

Munich, Germany.—Noel Pantser, a British newspaper correspondent accused of representing a recent Nazi gathering at which Chancellor Hitler spoke, will soon be released from the Munich jail and expelled from the Reich, an official statement said.

The state's attorney in Leipzig, the communique declared, found after mature consideration that there was no further cause for prosecuting Pantser and that "a continuance of his sojourn in Germany is undesirable."

No date was set for his release and expulsion. Pantser, a correspondent here for The London Daily Telegraph, was arrested October 25 and held at police headquarters on an official charge of "suspicion of espionage." For several days he was held incommunicado, but the British consul-general made strong representations and was later allowed to see him.

U. F. M. HAVE BEEN DECIDED TO KEEP OUT OF POLITICS

Portage La Prairie, Man.—The political status of the United Farmers of Manitoba has been maintained, it was decided at the three-day annual convention here. A policy of independence, free from all political party alliances, as adopted five years ago, was reaffirmed by a large majority.

Rejection of the proposal for political action brings to an end efforts made for political affiliation by the U.F.M. Co-Operative Commonwealth Federation, under the leadership of J. S. Woodsworth, leader of the group in the House of Commons. The vote was not recorded.

A resolution was adopted rejecting mortgage companies to refund farm mortgages as speedily as possible on an amortization basis at low rates of interest. It was described as a "measure of compromise" giving the "other fellow" a chance, and it was suggested that a 20- to 25-year amortization plan with the possibility of administration through a public lands board.

Inflation, controlled by an independent commission under federal government supervision, debt adjustment and marketing problems were given consideration Wednesday.

The suggestion was made all money contracts should be revised to lessen payments of debts would be possible. Loan companies, it was argued, should be prepared to take their share of loss resulting from the economic depression.

DISCUSSIONS ON BRITISH DEBT TO BE CONTINUED

Washington.—A continuation of negotiations on the British war debt was decided on at a White House conference in which the chief British and United States spokesmen talked with President Roosevelt.

The discussions, in progress nearly a month, have failed to produce any definite achievements and it had been intimated that the British were growing restless and thought of bringing them to a conclusion.

The situation was laid before the president at a meeting lasting an hour and a half. At its conclusion the White House said:

"This was a conference on the subject of the debt settlement—a continuation of the discussion. The discussion will be continued. There was nothing at all final. So far as all purchases of English goods are concerned that subject was not brought into the discussions at all."

Those who talked with the president were Sir Frederick Leith-Ross, special representative of the British treasury; Ambassador Sir Ron Lindsay and Undersecretary David Acheson of the treasury, chief American representative in the conversations.

At the outset of the negotiations, officials were pessimistic of bringing from them any concrete compromise. There have been conferred with the task of compromising the opposite viewpoints of a popular British purchase of American goods and congressional insistence that the instalments be paid in full.

The British debt now totals approximately $1,000,000,000. With interest added, payments of more than $9,000,000,000 are scheduled for the next 31 years under the funding agreement now in effect.

Acheson said after the White House conference that it was hoped that negotiators had been scheduled for today. He added he expected the discussions to go on for a considerable period.

Predicts N.R.A. Defeat If Press Muzzled

Would Make Roosevelt's Plan Impossible Opinion Of Mr. Henry Stimson

Toronto, Ont.—Predicting the failure of the National Recovery Act if the United States Government attempts to extend its control of industry to the editorial sanctuaries of the press, Henry Stimson, newspaper publisher, declared if the people of the United States accept suppression of the press it meant the death of the country. One will be the carrying of air mail to Cammell, about 25 miles from Cammell Bay, the principal settlement on Great Bear Lake, while the other will extend to the mouth of the Arctic Ocean itself, to Coppermine, which is 20 miles south of Cammell Bay.

The eight cables, originally sought after by philatelists, will be issued to commemorate the opening of the post office at Cammell River and the Coppermine. There are special air mail stamps.

District Superintendents Filling Postmaster's Place In Some Cities

Ottawa, Ontario.—For reasons of economy no appointment will be made by the government to fill postmaster positions in cities where district superintendents are located, it was learned here. The functions of district superintendent and postmaster will be combined, the former performing the duties of the latter.

Vacancies exist at present in Toronto, Winnipeg, and Moose Jaw, but the government does not intend to fill them. The postmaster will be undertaken by the district superintendents concerned.

Ambitious Plan To Construct Ocean Airports To Facilitate Air Travel Across Atlantic

Long the blue-printed dream of an imaginative inventor and his associates, construction of a chain of seadrome ocean docks across the Atlantic may soon become a reality under the NIRA.

The Seadrome Ocean Dock Corporation, formed to translate into actuality the plans of E. R. Armstrong, the seadrome inventor, has applied to the Federal Public Works Administration for a $30,000,000 loan for the construction of five seadromes.

Claiming its revolutionary project is now a feasible and practical venture, the Seadrome Corporation asserts granting of the loan would cost 10,000 men back to work in 30 days and would create a demand for 125,000 tons of steel.

The seadrome, or floating ocean airport, was first conceived by Armstrong in 1913, while he was striving to develop some safe method for trans-oceanic air travel. Under present plans the seadromes would be strung across the ocean at intervals of about 400 miles, to provide safe landing spaces for planes.

An open works structure of iron and steel, the seadrome is 1,225 feet in length and about 300 feet wide. Its principal characteristic is a huge aeroplane landing deck, rectangular in shape with narrow ends. The deck of the landing deck of a naval aeroplane carrier.

These buoyancy tanks would maintain the landing deck on an even keel 100 feet above the waterline while the gigantic seadrome itself remains attached to the ocean by its moorings attached to a 1,500-ton reinforced concrete anchor.

Because of its openwork grid construction, sponsors claim the seadromes can withstand the buffeting of huge ocean waves while they explain will pass through the heaviest understructure without breaking.

Beneath the huge landing deck where aeroplanes will come to rest and take off again will be service quarters, repair shops, weather bureau, radio equipment, beacon lights and modern hotels. Passengers will be able to stop overnight at the seadrome hotels in the middle of the ocean where, can patronize restaurants, shops, beauty parlors, theaters and gymnasiums. The seadromes will also have stock exchange branches and even fishing facilities.

Use of the seadromes, according to the sponsors, will not only eliminate practically every vestige of danger and chance from trans-oceanic flying but will make the Atlantic crossing a matter of only 30 hours at the most.

Each seadrome, a world in itself, weighs 63,000 tons and will cost an estimated $6,000,000. Each will be manned by a resident personnel of 100, 125 and a floating payroll of between 300 and 400 men.

The first seadrome would be anchored in the ocean about 375 miles east of New York City. The second would be built at intervals of 470 miles in a line east to the Azores and the final link between the Azores and the coast of Spain.

Seadromes anchored in the Gulf Stream, which is equivalent to the semi-tropical latitude of Bermuda and the Azores, are expected to prove popular summer resorts.

In applying for the NIRA loan, the corporation set forth that the seadrome project will be self-liquidating as a result of revenue expected from hotel and store concessions and fees from the several trans-Atlantic airlines expected to patronize the seadrome islands of steel.

It is further pointed out that no federal state, municipal or local board approval is necessary and no land grants are involved, while the $30,000,000 loan which would completely revolutionize ocean travel and place Europe only 30 hours away by air, is much less than the cost of even one naval aeroplane carrier.

The seadromes would be constructed in sections, beginning at ship-building yards at Philadelphia and Chester, Pa., towed to the Delaware breakwater for assembly, and from there, their final resting place in the Atlantic.

Discover Lost Tribe
Discoverers of a "lost tribe" in the Himalaya mountains in 1931, Dr. J. H. Huxley, British explorer, and Dr. J. H. Huxley, British explorer, made up of about 400 people live at an altitude of between 20,000 and 25,000 feet, in a valley between the Himalaya and the Himalaya, still retain the characteristics of an ancient civilization, they stated.

Trying New Experiment Modern Housing Plan Is Becoming Popular in Chicago

Under direction of a foundation established by the Life Insurance Fund, department store owner, a novel experiment in modern city housing is being conducted in Chicago.

It is a five-story apartment building, covering two blocks, and making available to tenants a unique plan of community life that includes care and training of children by teachers and nurses.

Priest to attract tenants of average means the building contains nearly 500 apartments. Stores, restaurants, barber shops, and a community hall are included in the building.

A court running along the entire length of the two blocks provides room for a flower garden, shrubs and fully-equipped playgrounds for children from one to twelve years of age.

The most popular innovation, however, is a well-directed department for child care and training. A classroom for primary instruction is provided. Also there is a nursery where mothers may leave their children all day.

In addition to the usual school subjects, musical and dramatic training is provided for children, inclined toward these arts. Industrial and vocational training likewise is provided.

Angelo Patri, noted authority on child training, is in charge of the new experiment: "I have dreamed of such a scheme for years. I tried to organize such a plan in New York, but my plan was rejected. I sincerely hope your pioneering effort will succeed."

Distinct Failure Financially

First Cow Taken On Polar Expedition Made Milk Exports
The two milch cows Admiral Byrd is taking with him to the Antarctic are not the first of their kind to be included in the equipment of a polar expedition, Captain Joseph B. Ford, the veteran Canadian explorer, took a cow with him to Melville Island in 1908. Biologically, the results of that experiment may have justified the trouble involved, but from a financial standpoint it was a distinct failure. Quartered securely aboard the ship, the cow died of starvation, and after a while the admiral's cow was sent back to the States.

Byrd's cow did not come back to the States as a scientific project in civilization. Victim of her own devastating appetite and an irrepressible longing for the part of Byrd's men for fresh meat, she encountered a much more prosaic fate. A disillusioned Government issued instructions that there after its expeditions would have to be content with canned milk. — New York Sun.

Reducing The Noise
Study was learning to play the bagpipes. One night he was strutting about the room, skirling for all he was worth, his wife attempted a musical piece. "That's an awful noise you're making," she said.

Sandy sat down and took off his bagpipes, then got up and resumed his playing in his stockinged feet.

Construction in Australia has been expanding for several months.

HITLER PLEADS FOR RETURN OF COLONIES

A report emanating from Berlin stated that Chancellor Hitler has made a plea for the peaceful return of the German colonies taken from her after the Great War. Above is a rough outline map of Africa, showing the German colonies which were captured by the Allies during the Great War. Those shaded with horizontal lines are now British possessions, while the small area shaded with horizontal lines has become French property. There are several small islands in the Pacific which were taken from Germany and which she would like returned.

SYNOPSIS

Camilla Hoyt, young and beautiful commercial artist, and Peter Anson, a struggling sculptor, are in love. Camilla and fall in love. She is the adopted daughter of a woman who has been married to her in their former life when she comes of age. They are faced with the problem of marriage or career and Camilla decides to go to the States where she has no more promise as a sculptor. At an art school, she meets Peter. At a wedding dinner at Charm Cottage near the campus, Camilla had said, "I'd like that because that is where we met first. It's a duck of a place anyway. I always loved it there. The name suits the place exactly, and perhaps it will be the charm for our future happiness."

The June day justified its reputation for being synonymous with love and matrimony. The beautiful day was flaunted riotous colors of flowers and vivid new dresses of early summer. The couples gathered and met to form shaded cloisters and roses rambled everywhere with leucis and fragrance.

"Story it's over?" he asked anxiously.

"Why, of course not. There never was a happier bride than I am, Peter. I could be so sorry."

"I hope you never will be," he declared solemnly.

"Oh, Peter, that's no tragic. You act as if this were terribly serious. Aren't you happy about it?"

"It is serious, darling. Just as serious as being happy and that is in the superlative degree. It means that I have a chance to fall now."

"You're kidding me," she better inspiration could have said? Isn't that why most people succeed who do not fail?"

"That's right. When you have to win at all or lose all, you can ignore the challenge. It's the halfway people who don't take a chance, and who are along for the ride. They take nothing and gain nothing of importance."

"I guess that's right. It takes the fear of losing to stir you to greater effort. My fear of losing you should send me to the top like a skyrocket."

"Just be sure that you don't leave me behind," she warned him with a happy denial of any such possibility.

The wide, iron-banded door of Charm Cottage stood open to welcome them and the gold of the setting sun flooded through its windows to heat them. It was early and besides there were few students on the campus during this week between the end of the summer term and the beginning of the new year.

So the place was almost deserted. They selected a table for two beside an open window where the breeze fluttered white curtains of dotted muslin and the sunlight danced across the room to its reflection in the burnished copper plates ranged on the stone mantel. Quaint prints and samplers on the walls reminded them of the past.

But that there was not the first love in the world, canaries and lovebirds twittered drowsily in gilded cages, a few cut flowers on each table contributed a festive air and the pastel-colored organic frocks of the waitresses added their final touch of color.

The little table had been chosen for its position. It was fitted with wedding guests and the serving girls attired for the occasion, thought Camilla happily.

"The menu looks as if they had expected wedding guests," she murmured with delight. "Look at this! Fruit cup, jelly tomato, onion, chicken breasts appetizer, bouillabaisse with Russian dressing, asparagus."

the price and hearing Peter's despondent replies there beside her, Camilla heard in her imagination the muted strains of organ music and remembered phrases, felt the invisible presence of admiring friends inhaled the fragrance of massed flowers, which depicted an anxiety that was a little too soon. A single white orchid that had cost five dollars, nestled in "the surrounding mist of white stervia and valley lilies where daisies might have haunted their frail beauty; but because it was the gift of this man who was pleading his love and cherish her until death did them part, that one orchid was more precious to Camilla than all the others in the world. It seemed to represent to her what Peter wanted to do and could not do for her now, but promised to her in the future. Like their faith in each other and life, it was not dropped by the majority of the other flowers; rather, its singular beauty was accentuated by its more commonplace surroundings.

It was only a few minutes until Peter had signed the little check circled with gold over her finger and kissed her with a tender possession of a whole congregation had witnessed the declaration—and they were man and wife.

They shook hands with the waitresses and native reacted some perfunctory phrases of congratulation, papers were signed, the very nominal fee paid, and they were out on the street, hand in hand, and a little awe with the immensity of the sudden transition from inertia into life.

"Out to the boulevard to University Place."

The wide, iron-banded door of Charm Cottage stood open to welcome them and the gold of the setting sun flooded through its windows to heat them. It was early and besides there were few students on the campus during this week between the end of the summer term and the beginning of the new year.

So the place was almost deserted. They selected a table for two beside an open window where the breeze fluttered white curtains of dotted muslin and the sunlight danced across the room to its reflection in the burnished copper plates ranged on the stone mantel. Quaint prints and samplers on the walls reminded them of the past.

But that there was not the first love in the world, canaries and lovebirds twittered drowsily in gilded cages, a few cut flowers on each table contributed a festive air and the pastel-colored organic frocks of the waitresses added their final touch of color.

The little table had been chosen for its position. It was fitted with wedding guests and the serving girls attired for the occasion, thought Camilla happily.

"The menu looks as if they had expected wedding guests," she murmured with delight. "Look at this! Fruit cup, jelly tomato, onion, chicken breasts appetizer, bouillabaisse with Russian dressing, asparagus."

"I guess that's right. It takes the fear of losing to stir you to greater effort. My fear of losing you should send me to the top like a skyrocket."

"Just be sure that you don't leave me behind," she warned him with a happy denial of any such possibility.

"Order anything you wish, dear, and I'll have the same. Don't, please, don't look at the prices. After today, you may," he conceded.

"Then we shall have the special dinner," she decided.

They lingered over the food, talking and planning with gay confidence. Peter had furnished his studio room alone, as he would have done before.

He was a whole congregation had witnessed the declaration—and they were man and wife.

They shook hands with the waitresses and native reacted some perfunctory phrases of congratulation, papers were signed, the very nominal fee paid, and they were out on the street, hand in hand, and a little awe with the immensity of the sudden transition from inertia into life.

"Out to the boulevard to University Place."

There was a small crowd at the wedding dinner at Charm Cottage near the campus. Camilla had said, "I'd like that because that is where we met first. It's a duck of a place anyway. I always loved it there. The name suits the place exactly, and perhaps it will be the charm for our future happiness."

The June day justified its reputation for being synonymous with love and matrimony. The beautiful day was flaunted riotous colors of flowers and vivid new dresses of early summer. The couples gathered and met to form shaded cloisters and roses rambled everywhere with leucis and fragrance.

"Story it's over?" he asked anxiously.

"Why, of course not. There never was a happier bride than I am, Peter. I could be so sorry."

"I hope you never will be," he declared solemnly.

"Oh, Peter, that's no tragic. You act as if this were terribly serious. Aren't you happy about it?"

"It is serious, darling. Just as serious as being happy and that is in the superlative degree. It means that I have a chance to fall now."

"You're kidding me," she better inspiration could have said? Isn't that why most people succeed who do not fail?"

"That's right. When you have to win at all or lose all, you can ignore the challenge. It's the halfway people who don't take a chance, and who are along for the ride. They take nothing and gain nothing of importance."

"I guess that's right. It takes the fear of losing to stir you to greater effort. My fear of losing you should send me to the top like a skyrocket."

Canadian Rockies Pioneer Passes

Tom Wilson is dead. Pathfinder, trail-blazer, hunter, trapper, prospector, Indian fighter, wise adviser and dependable friend, oldest and most colorful of Canadian Rockies guides, the last of the pioneers, Tom Wilson, has gone to his rest.

The happy 74th birthday of the old pioneer was celebrated by his friends and relatives at his home in the deep blue hills, hidden by curtains of trees, no different from the old pioneer's life. He was a man of many parts, a new pen to conquer, it will scarcely be Paradise to him. He has gone; we shall not look upon his like again.

His life work started as far back as 1881 when he went out with the Canadian Pacific exploring and surveying parties through the Rockies. In 1882 he set the foundations of his later fame with his discovery of Lake Louise and Emerald Lake, following it up with the blazing of the foot trail up the Yoho Valley in 1884.

In his own person he was history, the history of the western mountains. It was fitting that he should be present at the driving of the last spike on that fateful day of November 1885 that marked the completion of the Canadian Pacific trans-continental main line across the Dominion from the Atlantic to the Pacific. Nor was he the least of the great men who there assembled.

In 1884 he made his discovery of Lake Louise accessible by a trail to that beauty spot; in 1882 he took his first party to camp at the base of
